1 Foreword

The editors are most grateful to those who have contributed this year. They regret that, although it was originally hoped to produce BBBS earlier in the year, this has not, for a number of reasons, proved possible.

In this, the first issue of the new team, the editors are happy to thank their predecessors, Margaret Mullett and Rosemary Morris for handing over BBBS in such good form and order.

8 Other Resources

LONDON. The British Museum has made the following acquisitions:
Ian T. Roper's collection of Late Antique and Byzantine balances and weights (439 items).

An important gold and garnet opus interrasile necklace-fragment with chi-rho (Constantinopolitan; 4th century).

Two 12th century Byzantine sgraffito dishes.

Two 12th century painted glass bangles.

Two 5/6th century East Roman bronze weights, each weighing 6 Byzantine ounces and inlaid with silver.

The ivory horn known as the Clephane Horn, on loan to the B.M. from the Marquess of Northampton since 1914 and now purchased from the estate of the 6th Marquess. With scenes from the Hippodrome at Constantinople.

An important gold cruciform buckle (Constantinopolitan, 7th century).

NEWCASTLE. The John Cowan Library in the Department of Archaeology at Newcastle University, whose holdings include the Gertrude Bell offprint collection, has a new librarian, Mrs. C. McLure.

The Gertrude Bell Photographic Archive has a new (part-time) research assistant, Mrs. L. Roberts, who also continues to work on the Sarachane excavation report.

Miss C. Tagart is now working as research assistant for the publication of survey and excavation in Roman and Byzantine Libya.

OXFORD. The Ashmolean Museum has made the following acquisitions:

A substantial collection of bronze objects of the 5-14th centuries, including crosses, polycandela, lamps and stands, liturgical objects, bells and other fittings (most of these objects are inscribed).

15 bread stamps in bronze, pottery, stone and wood

Amulets of silver, bronze, lead, glass and pottery, several featuring S. Simeon Stylites.

A gold earring.

A silver dish with control stamps.

The Christchurch Art Gallery has been left a collection of icons by an old member, C.R. Patterson. Some are Greek, most are Russian, all are post-Byzantine. From 11 May to 22 June 1980 they formed the nucleus of an exhibition at the gallery, for which a catalogue was prepared by Dr. Nicholas Gendle (Icons at Oxford, obtainable from the gallery @ £1.25).
